

LOVE NEVER QUILTS: Surviving & Thriving After Infertility, Adoption, and Reactive Attachment Disorder

LOVE NEVER QUILTS is the true story of the hell one family lived through parenting a child with reactive attachment disorder, a severe diagnosis related to children who experienced early-childhood trauma.

This inspirational story covers over a decade of daily struggles until they finally found resolution and made it to the other side. The family remained intact, and this once challenging son is now achieving things never thought possible.

SELLING POINTS:

- After the shooting at Marjorie Stoneman Douglas high school, RAD was in the news as the diagnosis for Nikolas Cruz
- Mental health in children and teens is a hot topic
- Adoptive and foster parents are sorely lacking in positive stories of success overcoming RAD
- Love Never Quits has multiple target audiences: parents of challenging children, adoptive parents, counselors, therapists, and teachers

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

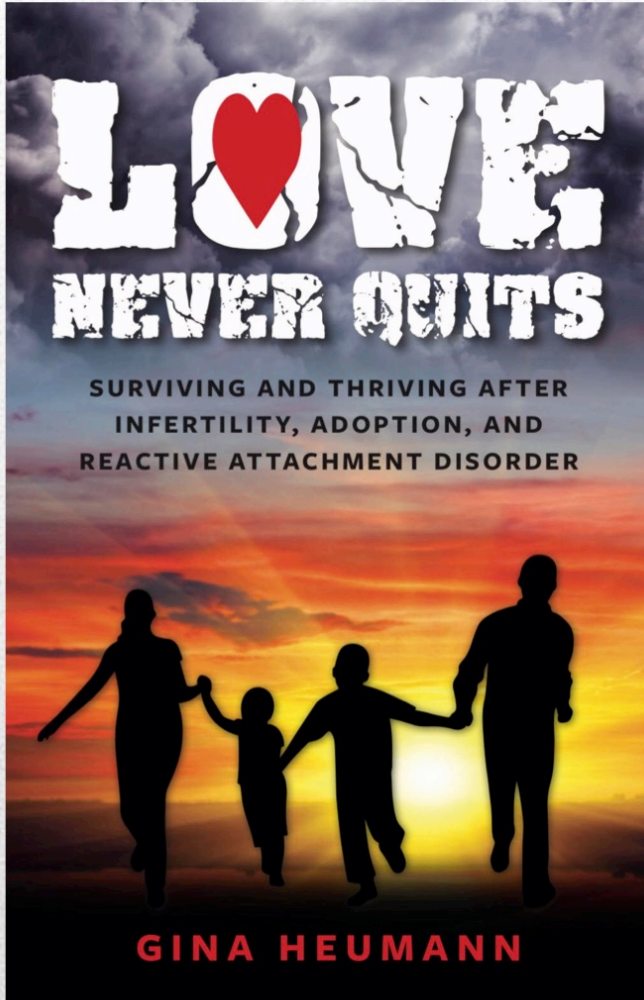

Gina Heumann is a true Renaissance woman: wife, mother, architect, designer, instructor, author, speaker, and sales rep for an award-winning Napa Valley winery. She and her husband, Aaron, adopted Landrey in 2001 from Guatemala and then went back for Maddox three years later. Gina's love of learning and dedication as a mother inspired her research of different treatments and therapies that eventually led to this inspirational success story about conquering Reactive Attachment Disorder.

REVIEWS FROM READERS FAVORITE:

"... honest, and often shocking account of how RAD manifests itself..."

"... A moving memoir and highly recommended for any parent."

"...Heumann has much to teach readers about patience, faith, and never giving up on those that you love."
